

Job canvas – Strategy & Business Design

Job summary

As an analyst within Strategy and Business Design you will be inputting in the conversations that define the direction an organisation will take for the years to come.

Responsibilities

- Research and analysis to develop insight for the client
- Supporting project teams to build strong client relationships
- Collaborating with other disciplines to bring in insight from all over Deloitte
- Facilitation of workshops with clients to unpick problems
- Development of presentation material, often the output of work

Team

Strategy and Business design projects are often focused on the big questions that the chief execs wrestle with, and they engage us when they need that external strategic lens to advise them.

This means we must quickly get up to speed on the organisation and the challenges it faces. We often do this through research and analysis, both desk based and interview/workshop based. Next we use the different strategic frameworks that we have available to come up with approaches and solutions to these questions, and present the solutions back to the client team in a digestible and impactful way.

The teams can often be small which means from day 1 you will be involved in all the big conversations and will be working closely with our clients.

How we invest in you

- Comprehensive 90-day induction plan and onboarding
- Individual buddy and coach to help you settle into working and shape your career
- Subsidised further education and study days
